Age, weather and termites had all taken their toll on Building 56 (The Museum Building) at Victoria Barracks. Housing Busby's Bore in one corner, this historic building required careful restoration and reroofing.

Because of our expertise in traditional building methods, Coleman & Fairburn was engaged to undertake the refurbishment of the building, including gable walls, windows, iron and slate roofs. The Department of Defence insisted on the use of matching timber species when framing or cladding elements were being replaced.
